Jennifer D. Klein's first book, The Global Education Guidebook: Humanizing K-12 Classrooms Worldwide through Equitable Partnerships, will be available for pre-order in spring of 2017, and in print by June (Solution Tree Press). The central intent of The Global Education Guidebook is to equip educators with strategies for bringing the world into their classrooms through global partnerships, both with partner schools/classrooms and with global organizations/individuals, for the sake of student learning and the development of students' global competencies. The Global Education Guidebook will provide a rationale for global education in general and global partnerships in particular, and will explore "global competency" and how to assess it. The Global Education Guidebook will provide teachers with frameworks for finding a partner, developing an equitable collaboration, communication strategies and platforms, maintaining partnerships over time, and assessing their success. The Global Education Guidebook will also include case studies from different grade levels and disciplines, to ensure that teachers can envision global partnerships in action across the pre-K-12 experience, as well as testimonials from young graduates whose career paths have been impacted by early partnership experiences.
